UNITED STATES INTERNATIONAL TRADE COMMISSION
Washington, DC  20436

MEMORANDUM ON PROPOSED TARIFF LEGISLATION
of the 109th Congress ¹

[Date approved: July 26, 2005]²

Bill No. and sponsor: H.R. 1700 (Rep. Pascrell); 109th Congress.

Proponent name, location: Association of Food Industries, Inc.
3301 RT 66, Ste. 205, Bldg. C
Neptune, NJ 07753

Retroactive effect: None.

Suggested article description(s) for enactment (including appropriate HTS subheading(s)):

Capers, prepared or preserved by vinegar, in immediate containers each holding more than 3.4 kg (provided for in subheading 2001.90.10).

Product information, including uses/applications and source(s) of imports:

Capers are the unripened flower buds of Capparis spinosa, a prickly, perennial shrub-like plant. It measures about 3 feet tall and has small, green herb buds that are harvested by hand.³ Capers are used in a number of classic French sauces (rémoulade, ravigote, Tartare).⁴ Major world producing countries include Spain, France, Italy, Greece, Algeria, Egypt, Morocco, Tunisia, Cyprus, and Iran.⁵ Production data for these countries are not available. Areas with intensive caper cultivation include Spain (2,600 hectares) and Italy (1,000 hectares).

Total U.S. imports of capers, both dutiable and nondutiable, in 2004 under HTS subheading 2001.90.10 were about $3.8 million.⁶ Turkey and Spain account for a significant share of imports, while other suppliers include Italy, Morocco, and Turkey. Some U.S. food processors repackage imported capers under a domestic private label. Information on U.S. caper growing and processing is not available. Caper plants are grown in the United States for sale by retail nurseries, primarily for use in landscaping and as ornamental plants. Other limited information suggests that capers may be grown in small quantities as a food crop in northern California. The California Agriculture Statistics Service reports no documented commercial caper production.

Estimated effect on customs revenue:

For this analysis, dutiable U.S. imports for 2005-2009 are projected assuming a simple linear trend from reported import values in recent years. The Commission’s estimates of the potential reduction in tariff revenue take into account likely shipments from countries eligible for special rates of duty; in doing so, it is assumed that all shipments reported as products of Morocco in recent years would become eligible for duty-free entry under the U.S.-Morocco Free Trade Agreement once it is implemented.

The table lists the industry representatives contacted by the Commission and the submissions received in 2004, in response to similar bills of the 108th Congress. (See H.R. 5017 and H.R. 5018 (108th Congress, Rep. Pascrell) available at the Commission’s website.) All submissions received by the Commission are attached in the appendices to this report.

10 Moroccan imports have been declining but were entered with payment of the general duty rate. In 2003, Morocco accounted for just $10,000 of dutiable U.S. imports, and in 2004 for only $2,000 of such imports, under HTS subheading 2001.90.10 and no shipments under the GSP program.

The Commission may express an opinion on the HTS classification of a product to facilitate consideration of the bill. However, by law, only the U.S. Customs Service is authorized to issue a binding ruling on this matter. The Commission believes that the U.S. Customs Service should be consulted prior to enactment of the bill.

Technical comments:

It is suggested that the article description be amended as shown on page one. Inserting “immediate” in the article description before the word “containers” would track exactly the language of the permanent tariff provision applicable to the subject goods, and adding the word “each” is a clarification that appears in many tariff descriptions. Omitting the reference to acetic acid would accord with Food and Drug regulations that do not allow acetic acid to be used on products for consumption as food.
