Macroporous ion-exchange resin comprising a copolymer of styrene crosslinked with divinylbenzene, thiol functionalized (CAS No. 113834–91–6) (provided for in subheading 3914.00.60)

Check one: X Same as that in bill as introduced.

Different from that in bill as introduced (see Technical comments section).

Product information, including uses/applications and source(s) of imports:

Rohm and Haas imports this ion-exchange resin under the trade name Amberlite® GT73. This resin is described as a weakly acidic, positively charged cation exchange resin used for the removal of positively charged mercury cations from chemical process streams. Typically these streams are found in manufacturing facilities which use the “mercury cell process” for manufacturing chlorine and caustic, also known as the chlor-alkali process. This resin also provides for mercury removal in the fluorescent light bulb manufacturing industry. The proponent’s product is manufactured and imported from Chauny, France. Sybron Chemical, Inc., Birmingham, NJ (LANXESS Corp.) reports domestic production of this product.
